Public Health Model of Trauma-Informed Care for Developmental Disability Services

Intensive Intervention
- Evidence-based assessments and treatments are provided to people displaying symptoms related to trauma or to those recently exposed to traumatic events.

Secondary Prevention
- Resilience-based approaches are emphasized and reflected in the person’s service plan to foster hope, safety and well-being for people with a history of trauma.

Universal Promotion
- Supportive relationships, person-centered thinking and self-determination promote a sense of control, belonging and safety for all persons.

Essential Foundation
- Policies, procedures and training are provided at the system and agency levels to address secondary trauma and to promote inclusion of all persons.
